

Old Timer's Album

WE RAN A PHOTO some time back, a view of this event in Souderton, but much of the information then was guesswork. Harry Foesig dug into his files and came up with a fistful of photos taken by Ray Albright of Penn Studios when this 100-series Lehigh Valley trolley suffered what apparently was a hotbox at the Penn and Broad streets intersection. As yew k'n plainly see it was everybody down-and-under to see where the smoke was coming from. Perseverance Company put out the blaze, which occurred Feb. 1, 1949.
